CARING FOR THE ENVIRONMENT IN THE WIDER CARIBBEAN

- Remember proper waste management in voyage planning.
- Don't discharge garbage into water except for restricted discharge of ground up food waste beyond 3 miles from land.
- Don't dump oil, fuel, cleaning agents and any other such harmful substances into the water.
- Yachts are encouraged to use the shore reception facilities provided, otherwise discharge sewage into the water more than 4 miles from land. Yachts with holding tanks will be given preference for anchoring closer to shore within the established anchorages.
- Do not use any antifouling paints which contain organotin.
- Ensure there is sufficient water depth over underwater features of nature conservation interest, such as coral reefs, when navigating close to land and in confined waters. Keel damage may occur with little impact felt on the vessel.

- Ensure that the vessel is equipped with an anchor of adequate size and type together with sufficient cable or chain for the water depth encountered, seabed, weather conditions and degree of shelter to be found.
- Do not anchor on corals. Use areas designated for anchoring, unless the vessel is in peril.
- Take great care when going ashore as the area may be one where turtles have laid their eggs. Also avoid trampling plants, which are usually important components of the coastal ecosystem and assist in stabilizing beaches
- Don't allow children, dogs or cats to run loose as sites of nature conservation interest and sensitivity.
- The Government of Barbados does not allow the lighting of open fires on beaches. Permission must be sought from the National Conservation Commission at Tel: 246 536-0600 or email: ncc@ncc.gov.bb before conducting any activity on beaches involving flame.
- Source current information about the wildlife and natural conservation requirements of the places you intend to visit from Customs and Immigration Services, Marinas and Tourism Information Offices.
- Co-operate with the local communities and respect their culture.

We wish you a very pleasant stay in Barbados.
